Alma Lawrence was buried in 1931 in Idlewild Cemetery, Hood River, Oregon.

Notes for Alma Lawrence:

"Impressions and Observations of the Journal Man" by Alma (Lawrence) Howe. "I lived at Hood River more that 50 years, "aid Mrs. Alma Howe when I (?) interviewed her recently at Salem. "I was born at the little village of Fairfield, on French Pairie, on June 7, 1860. My father, Isaac N. Lawrence, was born in Kentucky. He crossed the plains to Oregon in 1852, when he was 19 years old. My mother's maiden name was Harriet Millsap. My mother was a half sister of Lorenzo A. Byrd, who was the son of John Byrd and Mary Wise Byrd, who were born in Kentucky. John Byrd died when Lorenzo was 2 years old. His mother then married Reuben Millsap, who had been an officer in the War of 1812, serving under General Jackson at the battle of New Orleans. My mother's half-brother, Lorenzo A. Byrd, was born in Arkansas in 1822. He crossed the plains to Oregon in 1846. The Rev. Josephus Cornwall was captain of the wagon train. They didn't arrive in Polk County till January, 1847. Mr. Byrd took up a claim in the spring of 1847 in the Waldo Hills. He went to the California gold diggings in the fall of 1848. In 1852 he bought 320 acres on French Prairie. He was married on New Years Day, 1854 to Marthja Crawford Savage, daughter of Dr. John Savage. The oldest of their eight children, William H. Byrd, was a prominent physician at Salem for many years. My father had six children by my mother. After Mother's death he married Emma Ditmar, by who he had five children. My half-sister, Mrs. Frances Beard, who lives in Astoria, and myself are the only ones of the 11 children now living. I started to school when I was 5 years old, at Butteville. Professor S.W. King was my teacher. After my mother's death Father moved back to Fairfield and married his second wife. I attended school at Fairfield awhile. We moved to Lake Labish, as he had secured the contract to furnish the ties and bridge timbers for the Southern Pacific Railroad, which was being built from Portland to Salem. When I was 9 years old - that would be in 1869 - Father moved his sawmill from Lake Labish to East Portland. All of our household goods, as well as the machinery, were put on scows and taken down the Willamette to East Portland. When we moved there, there were no streets, and we had to make our way among the stumps and fallen trees. Father sold his sawmill to Hogue & Abrams. He then moved to Crooked Creek, across from Astoria. For some time he ran a logging camp near Westport. He also ran a logging camp on Columbia Slough. All of his life Father worked in the woods, either in logging camps or running sawmills. I was married on September 10, 1878, to Dr. Samuel T. Howe. My husband was a dentist, and when I married him he was located in East Portland. Shortly after our marriage we moved to Hubbard, where my husband practiced dentistry till 1883, when we moved to Hood River, where I made my home for the next 51 years. After the death of my husband, I built and operated a resort known as Cottage Farm. I ran this resort from 1896 till 1933. The Ladds, Corbetts, Kerrs and many other well known people of Portland used to spend a few weeks at my home each summer. Thomas W. Lawson came for many years to spend a few weeks there each summer. At that time he was rated as a millionaire many times over. He published a book - not "Frenzier Finance" but another one. He had a few copies printed for his special friends. They were magnificently bound and each copy was in a special case. They cost $400.00 each. He gave me one of these books. I was very proud of it, particularly as it was inscribed by him to me. One time I went to my bookcase to show it to a guest and I found the empty case there. Someone had taken the book. I hope that whoever took it enjoyed it as much as I did. My daughter Hester went to school at Monmouth Normal School and taught for awhile. She went East, where she took pneumonia and died. The Indians used to call me their counselor and lawmaker. For 30 or 40 years they came to me for advice. One time Indian George came to me and said the Indians were being arrested for fishing out of season, and also that the white men would not let them fish for salmon where they had always fished. I asked him if he had any documents by which he could prove that they had a right to fish there. He brought me a treaty, which was signed by President Johnson, and which, in exchange for the land they had given up to the white men, guaranteed them the perpetual use of their accustomed fishing places. I phoned to the judge and after an examination of this document the Indians were very grateful to me, and I was glad to be able, for once, to see that white respected the right of the Indians. " From 'Alma Howe runs Cottage Farm like good ship'

"Alma visited her sister and brother-in-law, the David Parmenter's, in 1882 as the new railroad through the Columbia Gorge was about to end Hood River's isolation. A four-block townsite on the Coe Donation Land Claim already had a hotel and several stores. "The next year she came back to live. In 1885 she purchased from Parmenter 40 acres on Belmont Road (then Lyman Smith Avenue), including a two-room cabin. This had served as the first school-house in the settlement, erected about 20 years before. Parmenter had bought it for 20 bushels of wheat (from Dr. W. L. Adams) and moved it a quarter-mile east to his farm. (David Parmenter made this into a comfortable pioneer cabin by dividing the building into two rooms. The two rooms were still in use at the Cottage Farm in 1916). "In those rough pioneer year, Mrs. Howe became, as she was to be called later, "the angel of mercy of Hood River Valley." With some training as a nurse, she cared for the sick and the lonely, day or night, in any weather. It was said that "no appeal for help was ever rejected by Alma Howe." (From 'D.M.C. Historian, Mrs. Alma Howe, dated 1882.' -- In the year 1888, on account of the stress of hard times at Hood River, Mrs. Howe went to Portland and engaged in nursing. After four years of this strenuous labor, she returned to Hood River to recuperate her health and look after her neglected farm. In the summer of 1894 she erected a substantial building and opened her home to summer boarders and those in search of rest and quiet, the summer of 1895 was a busy hopeful time, but an accident in the fall made her a cripple, bedfast and helpless. The doctors decided that her foot must be amputated, but at her insistence, the operation was postponed until her finances could be arranged so that her daughter could be provided for. In the meantime there was improvement, slowly but surely the injured foot grew better, until at the end of four years, she was able to walk without crutches. During these four years she was not idle; twenty acres of land was sold, more rooms were added, summer boarders and invalids came to her home and were cared for. As she prospered improvements of all kinds were added. She now has thirty three rooms besides several tents to accommodate the crowds which flock to her home. The eleven acres of land remaining is carefully cultivated and yields good returns. "At the time, she kept a sharp eye on the slowly emerging community and took an active part in its development, as chairman of the School District No. 3 -- probably the first woman to serve -- and as a board member of the first hospital. She was a charter member of the early Belmont Methodist Episcopal Church, and an ardent prohibitionist. "Her greatest concern was for the few Indians still in Hood River. They lived in abject poverty, deprived of their rights to the land and its resources, dependent on the community for handouts. Alma Howe was the Indians' lawyer and advisor, financial counselor and even the legal guardian of some who were sick, elderly and destitute. "Her care of the natives was not without humorous moments. Indian George Chinidere once asked her to winter his three ponies at her farm. By then busy with her guest resort, she told him it would be impossible for her to spare the time. He replied, "Oh, that all right. George come live with you, take care of ponies!" "At one time, George borrowed 30 cents from Mrs. Howe. When he returned it, she asked why he had needed the money. "Bury brother," explained the stoic Indian. He had spent 25 cents for coffin lumber and five cents for nails. "Staying at a summer resort was a popular diversion for city people who could afford the luxury in the late 1890s and early into this century. Not for days, but for weeks or months at a time. Hood River became a fashionable place to while away the season. "After the death of Samuel, Alma built and operated a resort known as the Cottage Farm (1896 - 1933). The Ladds, Corbetts, Kerrs and many other well known people from Portland used to spend a few weeks at the resort each summer. Thomas W. Lawson came for many years to spend a few weeks there each summer. At that time he was rated as a millionaire many times over. He published a book -- not "Frenzied Finance" but another one. He had a few copies printed for his special friends. They were magnificently bound and each copy was in a special case. They cost $400.00 each. He gave me one of these books. I was very proud of it, particularly as it was inscribed by him to me. One time I went to my bookcase to show it to a guest and I found the empty case there. Someone had taken the book. I hope that whoever took it enjoyed it as much as I did. From Women's Week, Hood River, Oregon. Thomas Lawson, Boston financier and nick named 'Copper King', visited the Cottage Farm often after his daughter, Dorothy [Dorothy wrote a book called the "Ranch Under the Rimrock" where she describes Alma Howe's and her father's friendship], married Had McCall and came to Oregon. Thomas would often bring his grandchildren to the resort, including future governor, Tom McCall. From 'Mrs. Alma Howe by D.M.C. Historian in 1883,' "Mrs. Alma Howe went to the Methodist Old Folks home at Salem Oregon in 1931, where she spent eleven years. She died in 1942 at the age of 82 and was interned at Idlewild in Hood River, Oregon.
